The new executive director should be able to relate to and work with people from a diversity of backgrounds (the JCS expatriate staff includes people from 14 countries). As an administrator, the executive director not only oversees and facilitates the operations of the organization, but has the ability to see the big picture, give strategic guidance and implement vision.

Intentionally our strategies have been focused on working alongside Mongolians to empower them to know God's will and see it accomplished in their lives and in their nation. Our in-country registration is as a relief and development organization. We have done this in the past by implementing projects or providing professional volunteers with our strategic partners.

Over the last 5 years we have seen a shift from working on relief projects to development and support of Mongolians in leadership. We would want a new Executive Director to continue to be sensitive on how to support Mongolians and national organizations they lead. This would also include seeing more Mongolian involvement in JCS leadership and strategic development.
